4 Question 2 Extension :- Question 7 of HW2 Using Mongo DB

I wasnt sure whether I have to do Q7 from HW2 or Q2 from current HW, so I asked professor to do both.

This approach uses a geospatial query with MongoDB to approximate a circular search area as a polygon. First, we define a center point (e.g., specific coordinates) and a radius (e.g., 1 mile). A polygon is constructed to approximate the circle by calculating multiple equally spaced points around the center using trigonometric functions. This polygon is then used to query the restaurants and foreclosures collections with the `geoWithin` operator, identifying all entities that fall within the defined boundary. By leveraging geospatial indexing, the database efficiently retrieves results without manual distance calculations, allowing the same polygon to be reused for multiple queries, such as finding restaurants or counting foreclosures. This approach balances accuracy and performance while simplifying the geospatial search.

[37]: import math

target_coordinates = (35.994914, -78.897133) radius_in_miles = 1 # 1-mile radius def create_circle_polygon(center, radius, num_points=36):

    """Creates a polygon approximating a circle."""
    lat, lon = center
    earth_radius_miles = 3958.8
    angular_radius = radius / earth_radius_miles * (180 / math.pi)

    polygon = []
    for i in range(num_points):
        angle = 2 * math.pi * i / num_points offset_lat = angular_radius * math.cos(angle) offset_lon = angular_radius * math.sin(angle) / math.cos(math.
↪radians(lat))
        polygon.append([lon + offset_lon, lat + offset_lat]) polygon.append(polygon[0])
    return polygon

circle_polygon = create_circle_polygon(target_coordinates, radius_in_miles)

for restaurant in restaurants_within_circle:
    closest_restaurant = restaurant
    print("Closest Restaurant:", closest_restaurant)
